Overview of the Treatment of Opioid Use Disorder: Best Practices

This course provides an overview of Opioid Use Disorder (OUD) and its treatment. The presentation will review current epidemiology nationally, in California, and in Santa Barbara County, as well as a focus on evidence-based use of FDA-approved medications for OUD. There will be a discussion of new substances increasingly being found in the street drug supply that represent significant health risks. Risk reduction interventions that can help in the prevention of opioid overdose deaths will also be reviewed.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:
At the conclusion of this session, participants should be able to:

- Describe the current epidemiology of Opioid Use Disorder from a national, state, and local perspective. Explain the role of prescription pain medications and fentanyl in the epidemic.
- Identify the FDA-approved medications for treatment of OUD and compare and contrast the circumstances/conditions in which each medication might be selected.
- Compare two new opioids that have been identified in the street drug supply and the risk that the use of these substances present.
